Please write your message here. Take note of the style tips and talking points in the sidebar. I have only been in a Wal-Mart once to get some photos made--and I knew right then that I would never set foot into that place again.

I do understand that some people would feel that such a large bank would be a better bank. Far from it! My family does our banking in a small community bank that knows us and we can trust. If we have a problem, we know that we can get satisfaction from the person behind the desk.

I would tell people that "Big is not Better--It Is Just Bigger". Oh yes--and I do the grocery shopping in "Trader Joe's"--a much smaller store where the people all know you and can answer questions. How many different cans of "chicken soup" do you need? And that is my story regarding what's it's name--oh yeh--Wal-Mart! Jeanne Hum--yellowdragon@earthlink.net
